

A BILL establishing the boundaries of an addition to the Navajo Indian Reservation, Arizona, and making appropriation for purchasing the improvements of settlers within the addition.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the tract of land lying west of the Navajo and Moqui Indian reservations, in Arizona, embraced within the following-described boundaries, be, and the same is hereby, set aside as an addition to the Navajo Indian Reservation, namely: Beginning at the southwest corner of the Moqui Reservation and running due west to the Little Colorado River; thence down that stream to the Grand Canyon Forest Reserve; thence north on the line of that reserve to the northeast corner thereof; thence west to the Colorado River; thence up that stream to the Navajo Indian Reservation.

Sec. 2. That the following sum be, and is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated for the payment to settlers within the said boundaries for improvements thereon, forty-eight thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall and does, in his discretion, ratify and approve the agreement entered into by United States Indian Inspector McLaughlin with the settlers included within said boundaries and submitted by him to the Secretary with his report dated June thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, and shall find upon investigation hereafter to be made that the improvements of the settlers referred to remain intact and in good condition, the said agreement having been entered into by the settlers with said inspector on May thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine: Provided further, That the settlers shall remove immediately from the said addition to the reservation upon the payment of the sums named in their joint agreements referred to, if ratified and approved by the Secretary of the Interior.
